Albert Einstein was one of the most brilliant minds in history. He developed the theory of relativity, which revolutionized our understanding of space, time, and gravity. But what most people don't know is that Einstein was also a kind and compassionate man who was deeply concerned about the world around him.

In his book Little About Albert Einstein, author Walter Isaacson tells the story of Einstein's life and work. But he also tells the stories of other ordinary people who made a difference in the world. These are people like Rosa Parks, who refused to give up her seat on a bus in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1955; and Malala Yousafzai, who was shot in the head by the Taliban for speaking out in favor of education for girls.

Isaacson's book is a reminder that anyone can make a difference in the world. It doesn't matter if you're not a genius like Einstein. What matters is that you have a passion for something and that you're willing to work hard to make a difference.

Here are a few of the stories from Little About Albert Einstein:

- Rosa Parks was a seamstress who refused to give up her seat on a bus in Montgomery, Alabama, in 1955. Her act of defiance sparked the Montgomery bus boycott, which eventually led to the desegregation of public transportation in the United States.
- Malala Yousafzai was a Pakistani schoolgirl who was shot in the head by the Taliban for speaking out in favor of education for girls. She survived the attack and has since become a global advocate for the education of girls.
- Liu Xiaobo was a Chinese dissident who was imprisoned for his work to promote democracy and human rights in China. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 2010, but he died in prison in 2017.
- Wangari Maathai was a Kenyan environmentalist who founded the Green Belt Movement, which has planted over 51 million trees in Africa. She was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 2004.
- Kailash Satyarthi is an Indian child rights activist who has worked to free children from slavery and exploitation. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 2014.

These are just a few of the stories of ordinary people who made a difference in the world. Their stories are a reminder that we all have the power to make a difference, no matter how small.

If you're looking for a book that will inspire you to make a difference in the world, then I highly recommend Little About Albert Einstein. It's a book that will remind you that anything is possible if you have the courage to dream big and the determination to work hard.
