Andrew Fiu is a Purple Heart recipient and a true American hero. His story is one of courage, sacrifice, and perseverance.

Fiu was born in Samoa in 1985. He moved to the United States with his family when he was a child. He grew up in California and attended the University of California, Berkeley. After graduating from college, Fiu joined the U.S. Army.

In 2007, Fiu was deployed to Iraq. He served as a combat medic with the 101st Airborne Division. During his deployment, Fiu was involved in several firefights and was wounded in action. He was awarded the Purple Heart for his wounds.

After returning from Iraq, Fiu continued to serve in the Army. He was assigned to the Warrior Transition Unit at Fort Lewis, Washington. There, he helped other wounded warriors recover from their injuries.

In 2011, Fiu was medically retired from the Army. He returned to California and enrolled in graduate school. He earned a master's degree in social work from the University of Southern California.

Today, Fiu works as a social worker for the Department of Veterans Affairs. He helps other veterans transition from military to civilian life. He is also a motivational speaker and shares his story with audiences across the country.

Fiu is a true American hero. He has served his country with honor and distinction. He is an inspiration to us all.
