The Different Drum Community is not just a place; it's a philosophy, a way of life that extends far beyond its physical boundaries. It's a community where individuals from all walks of life come together, united by a shared vision of a just and equitable world. They come from diverse backgrounds, cultures, and beliefs, but they are all drawn to The Different Drum by a common desire to make a difference.

At the heart of The Different Drum Community lies a profound belief in the power of making. Here, making is not simply a hobby or a pastime; it's a way of life. The community members engage in a wide range of creative pursuits, from woodworking and pottery to music and dance. Through the act of making, they not only create beautiful and functional objects but also forge deep connections with one another.

The emphasis on making is deeply rooted in the community's Quaker heritage. Quakers believe that everyone has an inner light, a spark of divinity. The act of making allows individuals to tap into this inner light and express their creativity, their uniqueness, and their shared humanity. It's a way of bringing the divine into the everyday, of making the world a more beautiful and harmonious place.

But The Different Drum Community is not just a community of makers. It's also a community of peacemakers. The pursuit of peace is central to everything the community does. From its inception, the community has been committed to nonviolence and social justice. Members have participated in peace protests, worked to support refugees, and advocated for nuclear disarmament.

The community's commitment to peace is not just an abstract ideal. It's a lived reality that permeates every aspect of community life. Members strive to resolve conflicts peacefully, to forgive one another, and to extend compassion to all beings. They believe that peace is not just the absence of war but a positive state of being characterized by justice, equality, and respect for all.

Of course, The Different Drum Community is not without its challenges. Like any human community, it has faced its share of conflicts and disagreements. But the community's commitment to nonviolence and peacemaking has helped it to weather these storms and emerge stronger. Through dialogue, mediation, and a deep commitment to understanding one another, the community members have learned to resolve their differences peacefully and to build a more just and equitable community.

The Different Drum Community is a living example of the power of human connection, creativity, and peacemaking. It's a community that shows us what is possible when we come together, embrace our differences, and work together to create a more just and harmonious world. It's a community that inspires us to dream big, to believe in the power of peace, and to make a difference in the world.
